Confronted with Palazzo Versace for the very first time all sorts of expressions come to mind, but foremost is: Mama mia!

It's a unique twinning as Las Vegas meets Old Europe in this deliciously over-the-top tribute by Donatella to her late brother Gianni. Kitsch, perhaps; tacky, never. Everything is genuine Italian, from the multi-coloured river-stones that line the approach-way to the giant chandelier in the lobby, that once hung in Milan's state library. And everything is genuine Versace, from the furniture and fabrics to the cutlery and crockery, to the artworks from Gianni's collection that line the corridors.

Opened in 2000, the Palazzo achieved near instant success, and not simply because of its designer label. High standards are thoroughly evident throughout the property, and it's worth noting that the brand has proved so popular that a sister hotel is currently under construction in another part of the world renowned for its sun and sand - Dubai.

The Palazzo's 205 rooms and 72 condos look out onto ocean or marina views, while five palm-fringed, heated-saltwater lagoons lap their surrounds. Staff are clad all in Versace black and gold, and move about with a concerned elegance that would have won an approving nod from the man who used to opine: "Versace has only one level and that is the best".
